6/27/68

Mr. P. de Beausset
Paris-Match
Room 770, National Press Bldg.
Washington, D.C. 20004

Dear Mr. de Beausset,

I leave for New Orleans early in the morning, to return about 7/15. In my absence my wife will retype the enclosed manuscript and send it to you and Mr. de la Roche.

As I wrote the articles, they grew in length (and can be added to with little difficulty) until they grew into a short book. Sorry there was, as always, the inevitable haste. I had but parts of three long days for this writing.

Now that I have no time, it occurs to me that a chapter on the federal intrusions, both first person and what has happened and is happening to Garrison, with the Attorney General quoted, with what the federal courts are doing to pre-empt a state case, might be a good idea. I can do it in little time, if necessary.

Some of the material of which I have spoken to you could be added, if the return is commensurate, for it is the hottest material yet and I plan it for use in POST MORTEM.

Sincerely yours,

Harold Weisberg

3/27/68

Mr. P. de Rousset
Paris-Match
Room 770, National Press Bldg.
Washington, D.C. 20004

Dear Mr. de Rousset,

I leave for New Orleans early in the morning, to return about 7/15. In my absence my wife will retype the enclosed manuscript and send it to you and Mr. de la Roche.

As I wrote the articles, they grew in length (and can be added to with little difficulty) until they grew into a short book. Sorry there was, as always, the inevitable waste. I had but parts of those long days for this writing.

Now that I have no title, it occurs to me that a chapter on the federal intrusions, both first person and what has happened and is happening to Garrison, with the Attorney General quoted, with what the federal courts are doing to pre-empt a state case, might be a good idea. I can do it in little time, if necessary.

Some of the material of which I have spoken to you could be added, if the return is commensurate, for it is the hottest material yet and I plan it for use in [illegible]

Sincerely yours,

Harold Weisberg